

THE ERA OF ONE-SIZE FITS-ALL BENEFITS PLANS IS OVER

For the first time in history, many employers now have as many as five generations in their workforce. Most workers view benefits as an essential part of their compensation, but the types of benefits they want and need vary widely depending on age, income, family composition, and life stage.

Deliver the benefits your people want

Does your benefits broker give you insights into how your workforce demographics are changing from year to year? For example, is your average age changing as a result of hiring college graduates, or is your organization hiring more experienced workers for open positions?

Your risks change and so do the needs of your plan participants. Make sure you can quantify the change and proactively address the needs of your workforce.

Understand the segments within your employee population

Now, you can go beyond anecdotal information and get real insights that enable you to tailor your benefits to maximize employee satisfaction and enhance your competitive position.

Employee Persona Analysis from HUB

Give us a standard census, plus 6 additional pieces of data about your workforce and we'll give you a custom report that identifies the following:

- O Key personas within your workforce
- O Benefit gaps that put your employees at risk
- Recommendations on how to align benefits, communication and wellness strategies to have the greatest and most meaningful impact
- O Insights into what is driving your costs, your turnover and how attractive your benefits offering is to recruit potential and new employees

This analysis goes beyond just generational segments to give you a multi-dimensional understanding of your employees.

Get answers to key questions you may have:

- O Which segments of my employee population are financially fragile?
- O How do my hourly workers' benefit needs differ from my salaried workers?
- O What benefits will accelerate recruitment and retention?
- O How do career pathing and setting reasonable onboarding expectations change the overall health of my team?
